

I appreciate the FCC's attempt to protect private citizens from what is no less than harrassment by telephone solicitors. Unwanted invasion of privacy is aggravating and the aggressiveness of solicitors is exasperating. I would ask that whatever form your ruling takes, that it not infringe on individual state's rights to make laws concerning this issue. Therefore it is important that the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen the state of Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections already in place. Indiana's current law has greatly improved my privacy and my peace of mind. I don't go into business establishments that I have no interest in and I don't expect them to barge their way into my home over the phone. I used to get in excess of 10 calls a week and now recieve, on average, less than one. I can finally sit down to dinner after a long day and enjoy my family and my meal in peace. Thank you for your kind consideration.
